Forecast for Wednesday 30 Dec 2020

Weather: One or two light wintry showers at first on Wednesday morning, otherwise dry and bright start but cloud increasing from the west through the morning possibly bringing outbreaks of mainly light snow, especially to the south of the area, although there is a small risk of some heavier persistent snow. Any snow clears away by late afternoon and evening with clear spells and perhaps the odd shower following.

Chance of cloud free mountain/hill tops above 600m: Around 75% at first with occasional cloud above 600m falling to 25% by late morning with periods above 600m and perhaps close to zero for a time in the afternoon with more persistent cloud above 450m. Chances improve again through the evening.

Visibility: Very good, falling to just a few kilometres in any snow or snow showers and less than a kilometre in any heavier snow.
